Ann Herber Reigns As Queen; Musicale Pays Tribute To Court

Heavy rains forced the annual campus crowning pageant indoors, Sunday, May 27.

The student body met the queen, Ann Herber, and her court in front of the library, and formed a procession to the auditorium where the crowning took place.

Miss Herber, escorted by Paul Henn, was accompanied by her court, representative of the classes.

A coronation musicale featuring the Glee Club, comprising mixed voices, and the Bel Canto, a women's group, alternated with a woman's double trio, the Xallotines, and a man's double quartet, the Vibratos, followed in the college auditorium.

Fr. Brokhhage Speaks At Baccalaureate Mass Offered by Chaplain

Baccalaureate exercises for Marian's 32 graduates will take place June 5, beginning with a High Mass in the college chapel. Monsignor Doyle, college chaplain, will be the celebrant.

Father Joseph Brokhhage, S.T.D., will deliver the baccalaureate address. Former professor of philosophy at St. Mary-of-the-Woods College, Father Brokhhage is now pastor of Holy Rosary parish, Indianapolis, and also rector of the Catholic Latin school.

The Schola Cantorum, Bel Canto ensemble, male double quartet, and resident students, will compose the choir. The Gregorian Proper of the Mass for Corpus Christi will be sung by the Schola; Mass IX, Credo IV will be sung antiphonally by the Schola, and the student group; the combined choirs will sing the Motet: Cantate Domino, by Noyon.
Something opportunities have been overlooked. Have you ever thought that you do love better, Marian for women only, or as a co-ed school? It isn't an easy question to answer; usually we have a hint and say, "Well, the two ways are so different, and cannot be compared equally."

But with Marian as a center for the learning of the mind and the spirit, and with the additional opportunity for the development of the individual, she has been a leader in education for both boys and girls.

And the time has come when, perhaps, the time has come when a greater number of students will find satisfaction in what Marian has to offer. And thus a greater number of students will find satisfaction in what Marian has to offer.

It isn't clear from this text exactly what the question is, or what the conclusion might be. However, it does suggest that there might be a need for more research and exploration into the question of whether Marian should remain a women's college or become co-ed.

The text also mentions the need for more contact and a greater sense of gentility. It refers to the "fading" of these ideals, but acknowledges that they still exist. It suggests that Marian has a responsibility to continue to work towards these goals.

Overall, the text seems to be exploring the question of whether Marian should remain a women's college or become co-ed, and is suggesting that there are important issues to consider in making this decision.

The Phoenix

The Phoenix is the student newspaper of Marian College, a Roman Catholic women's liberal arts college located in Indianapolis, Indiana. It covers news, sports, arts, and other campus life events. The newspaper is published weekly and is available online and in print.

The Phoenix is an important source of information for students, faculty, and alumni, and is an essential part of the college community. It provides a platform for students to express their opinions and perspectives on campus issues, and is an important way for the college to communicate with its students.

The Phoenix is a valuable resource for anyone interested in learning more about Marian College and its community. It is a testament to the vitality and diversity of the college, and is an essential part of the college's identity.
Since this is the last column of the year and signs of relief are being voiced by numerous students, faculty members, and moderates, we will endeavor to extrapolate at some length on the athletic awards season of those representing Marillon college this past year. (What did he say?)

The basketball team’s victories can be counted on one finger, but their achievements have been marred. Despite the sacrifices received from the pens of the columnist, here and elsewhere, it can be said that the men, despite a definite handicap, showed their potential.

They started off well against Taylor, slumped to a low level but fought back uphill all season to finally score 103 points against Auburn. This and the 100 against the Geants continuing up until next year, and with the fellows finally used to playing together, they could be great.

The swimming team, the winning quite anonymously, has shown too much disappointment of the lack of swimmers, they weren’t once out of the race. Next year, they too could be great.

And now (sob) the baseball team. Said team once the basketball squad and can count the aftereffects in the woman’s world. The egg throwing contest was a test of the hands of the women, and from this the 400-point A.R.A. record—Lillian Gonzales, Erin Gibson.

For volleyball—Carol Depweg, Dorothy Baird, Erna Gibson, Mary Ann Kaelin, Deanna McGarvey, Ann Kaelin, Jo Marsh, Annette Richard.

For softball—Robert Connors, Dorothy Baird, Erna Gibson, Mary Ann Kaelin, Deanna McGarvey, Ann Kaelin, Jo Marsh, Annette Richard.

For 400-point A.R.A. record—Lillian Gonzales, Erin Gibson.

Flower and Game Floats

The day began officially at noon and there will be six more home games in the season, and with this stretch continuing up until next year, with the fellows finally used to playing together, they could be great.
