Attention, Playwrights!

The Catholic Students' Mission Crusade is sponsoring a contest for playwrights. Manuscripts must be sent to the Missions Department, The Crusade Council, Shattuck Avenue, Cincinnati 28, Ohio, and must be received there not later than April 10, 1944.

The action of the play must center around Catholic missionary service with heads covered, contains the phrase "either in church or outside of it!

Tips from a Bookworm

As we are at war, we can expect that many of the books published today will deal with the war and world problems. One of the leading Catholic books this spring is "Rig for Church" by James W. Haefner, which is a present Pontiff. They emphasize the value of the Catholic press to give us the true viewpoint on current affairs. Be sure to read these books in their entirety.

YOU NEED the Catholic Press

The Catholic Press Needs YOU

February has been set aside as the month during which we are asked to labor for the advancement of the Catholic cause. Although Catholic women have always taken an important part in this work, we must be sure not to neglect this very important apostolate.

For the promotion of the Catholic press we need writers... men and women who know their Faith and also know how to use their writing with that Faith; we need money; and we need articles that have a better word be avoided.

Reps Reading

On the magazine rack in these libraries are Catholic magazines as well as minor ones. But do you college students make use of them? Don't it true that you usually read the Reader's Digest instead of the Catholic Digest? We suggest that you order these magazines from the Catholic press. And if you cannot at the same time read them, you are losing out.

The Catholic press awakens interest in Catholic thought and life, strengthens our Faith and also know how to imitate true, the Catholic press is not that we may not agree with everything in it. We are Catholic students in a Catholic college. We have been told time and again that we should take full advantage of this. But are we taking full advantage of the Catholic press? Are we really interested in the Catholic press? Are we really interested in our Catholic publications? Are we really interested in the Catholic press?

"In vain will you build the delights of the New World, if you cannot at the same time build the delights of the Old World."

Words of Pope Pius XI.

Sodalists Set Up Vocation Project

Sodality prefect, Carmen de Barros, '47, altitude by the executive board of the Student Association, to succeed Grace Crawford, '46, announces plans for Vocation Week, March 12-19. Posters illustrating the major vocations and avocations will be displayed. A library exhibit of literature on vocations will acquaint students with source materials on vocations in general and on specific vocations.

First-hand vocational information is being secured from alumnae members. Letters telling of personal experiences as alumnae in their chosen careers will be posted on the bulletin board.

Speaker Explains "Ladies of Grail"

At the Catholic Forum, February 21, Dr. Lelv van Keizergrens, of Dutch nobility, traced the history of the organization known as "The Ladies of the Grail" and explained its objectives.

In Holland in 1920, this organization of lay women now numbers about 20,000 members. Training periods vary from three months, for ordinary workers, to three years, for trainers. After the training period, all members except the trainers, return to their homes and to their usual work in offices, in factories, etc. Here, by personal contact with their fellow workers, they interrelate in leading good Catholic lives. That is their apostolate.

They work in close cooperation with the bishops, priests, and religious of the respective dioceses in which they are established, but they are not a religious congregation. Members do not take vows or wear a religious habit.

In pre-Nazi Germany, in England, and in Australia, where the entire island has been reconquered for this purpose, they have done remarkable work. Dr. Kersberg, in an address on "mission to the United States," said Sandblasted was welcomed by Cardinal Mundelein into the diocese of Chicago.

Additional entertainment was provided by music students Mary Eileen Grosshans, Jane Meir and Erin Sansom. Victory Queen, Jo Venosa, gave a pep talk to the word war stalemate girls again, for now I have found what prayers to God Almighty will do to guide me through this war.

Uniformed Confraternities Express Gratitude

Contributions which Marian students have made to the Confraternity Home-Study Service are accomplishing interesting things. Letters from chaplain and service men express sincere gratitude for the priceless benefits of the religious instruction thus made possible. Not only Catholics, but interested non-Catholics, are participating in the instruction courses.

Typical sentiments are those of the sailor whose post-war instruction has come eagerly and generously to the cause when purchasing their own supply of stamps. Enough stamps were donated for the bond in approximately six weeks.

Alverna Hall Donates Bond to College Fund

Alverna residents have presented a bond to the bond committee. Bond to the school and are busily raising funds for the second. President of Queen Mary Ann Gallagher, said the bonds are being contributed to Marian's post-war building fund. "You must give," she said, "for this is the bond every Marian is doing as an official Red Cross unit will keep us victory-minded. The new athletic

Fashion Highlights

This in-between season, how hard it is on all of us, and on our clothes. Our clothes suddenly lose their beauty and glamour that were the deciding factors in selecting them. They take on a drab look that is almost unbearable.

Practical people that we are, we resolve to stop our money for a complete spring outfit and make our present clothes do. But how far can we go practically when there are so many tempting and beautiful clothes and accessories on the market?

Sheerless jumpers are taking the spotlight at present, a perfect "outfit" worn with a pink polka-dot blouse. A practical and stylish investment is the new shorly coat, alias "P" coat. It can; be worn at all season, and, strangely enough, it never loses its "zip." Due to O. P. A. regulations, new suits are a little on the skimpy side, however, clever and smart accessories are giving them the necessary pick-up. Paisley scarfs are strictly the newest rage in the accessory line. Dyeing bags still remain eye-catchers, and white gloves are simply a "must," still, appointed for the female attire. Since silk materials are so hard to secure in dressy blues, the "luky" has popped in as a substitute—"quality instead of quantity." American women seem to be very much pleased with the plastic earrings that are taking the place of precious jewelry. Maybe we aren't so terribly hard to please.

The new "festa" atmosphere is being brought out in full, colorful skirts worn with polka-dot blouses, and rope shoes. The combination makes a very striking picture.

The in-between season, well, American women will meet this crisis in their lives, even if it is only by wishing.

Association will serve as an outlet for some of the excess energy being displayed by the ten o'clock lights-out group. Lastly, the spiritual side of Marketing is being fostered by the daily recitation of the rosary for our boys in service, and by the plan for a visit a day to the Chapel.

LITERARY LAPSE

The members of one literature class were recently asked whether they knew the poem Mr. Finney's Turn by Longfellow. Maryann Todd promptly signified her readiness to respond and proceeded to recite the first four lines. Her recitation, when asked to continue, was, "That's all I know, I had it in a survey course."
