EDITORIAL

Due to our concerns as editors, and as Resident Assistants, we would like to inform the students of what is going on in regards to your safety and well-being.

Over the past few weeks, Marian seems to have been plagued by what has become more commonly known as "The Knight Stalker." Seemingly, most of the incidents reported have been rumor, and not fact.

"The only incident which has really been proven was the attack of the girl two weeks ago," says Security Officer, Bob Riley.

Though many more incidents have been reported, none have been directly related to the incident a few weeks ago. But, the girls are asked to be careful and to use precaution, especially at night time hours.

In the realization of the fear that some students have, many educational programs have been arranged. Also, a Safety and Security Committee has been set up. It is the duties of this committee to audit campus lighting and security, to reveal specific areas needing improvement.

Rumors of various incidents have spread rapidly, and with much exaggeration, across campus. We ask the students to please not repeat incidents they hear about to anyone, except possibly their R.A.'s, or Security. Many rumors have already caused more anxiety among fellow students than is necessary or needed. If you do indeed sight a problem, please contact an R.A. so that they might in turn, call security, or if necessary, the Indianapolis Police. We ask that you do not call I.P.D. yourself, or the News. They have already been called enough times, and we are beginning to sound like Peter calling "wolf."

If, while you are reading this, and feel that we are not behind you, please remember, that we too have spent many sleepless nights as you have, and we too would like to see this come to an end. We are just concerned that if these rumors do not come to an end, then when we are in real trouble, no one will take the time to listen, because of all the false alarms. We would like to see that the campus does become educated in safety and awareness through the many programs now being offered.

Having lived in Indianapolis all are lives, we may be more comfortable with the present situation than those who come from smaller towns. But, we too believe that what has been done in the ways of beefing up security, (there is now a female security officer stationed at Clare Hall from 8pm - 7am, and a car which does patrol campus at various times), is sufficient for now.
They're the band you either really like, or really hate. They're the band that rock reviewers can't make original criticism against because they've already been criticized in every possible way during their four year career. They're the band whose albums may get warning stickers put on them by an act of congress, for lyrics that "promote violence and satanism among young people." They are Motley Crue, and they played before a sold out crowd of 16,000 at Market Square Arena, on September 22.

After the pre-recorded "In the Beginning", Motley Crue, composed of vocalist Vince Neil, guitarist Mick Mars, bass Nikki Sixx, and drummer Tommy Lee, hit the stage and blasted into "Loc•Ks Tr•at Kill", the hit that was from their 1983 double-platinum album, Shout At The Devil. Through the concert, they mixed older songs such as "Piece of Your Action" and "Live Wire", with some newer ones like "Use It or Lose It", and "Louder Than Hell" off the already platinum Theatre of Pain album.

The energetic band during their almost two hour show and seemed to be having a good time. Although Mick Mars was a little less energetic than Neil or Sixx on stage, his considerable guitar prowess made up for it, especially during his brilliant ten minute guitar solo. After a rhythmic jam by Nikki Sixx and Tommy Lee, the drummer went into his own solo whereby he was chained to his drum kit which was raised by a hydraulic arm and went up to a complete 90-degree angle with Lee still playing! Vocalist, Vince Neil is not such an excellent vocalist, but his energy made up for it. Although he talked a lot to the audience and much of what he said was hilarious, not a single sentence could be printed here!

The stage show included a backdrop of the comedy and tragedy masks from the Theatre of Pain on it and a great amount of special effects, including explosions, showers of sparks, smoke, and high rising flames.

After closing the regular set with the hit "Smokin' in the Boy's Room", the Crue returned to plow through "City Boy Blues" and "Helter Skelter", and then left the stage, leaving the crowd satisfied.

However, they weren't through yet. They came back out and Neil told everyone that they were going to do a song that was going to be recorded live at MSA! Then they performed the classic "Jailhouse Rock" before finally leaving the stage for good.

FARM AID

For two days this weekend Champaign, Ill., became the heartbeat of America hosting the Farm Aid concert. With the help of Willie Nelson, John Cougar Mellencamp and Neil Young, it was one of the greatest events for rock stardom and America's farmers. It was for over 8,000 fans in the stands, over 100,000 fans outside, and over 40 million T.V. viewers a gathering for one great cause. A cause that has run this country from the beginning, the American farmer.

Through the generosity of Mike Weingartner, we were able to attend FARM AID with two tickets he had won from radio station WAPI. It is this kind of friendship and giving, shown by Mike to us, that made this concert what it was; the banding together of all Americans and working for that common goal; feeding the world and saving the American farmer.

The show began at 10:00 a.m. Sunday, with the entrance of the backbone of the whole show, Mr. Willie Nelson. He welcomed the crowd, said some inspiring words to the farmers, and started the 16 hour extravaganza, that we, and we are sure we are not alone, will never forget.

Outstanding performers who followed in the fifty group agenda included: Tanya Tucker, Loretta Lynn, John Connelly, Kris Kristopherson, John Schneider, The Beach Boys, Don Henley, John Denver, Waylon Jennings, the incredible Johnny Cash, Bob Dylan, Daryl Hall, Billy Joel, Randy Newman, Joni Mitchell, Charlie Daniels Band, Alabama, Foreigner, Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, John Fogerty, and the legend of blues music, Mr. B.B. King. Space limits naming the rest, but one can only imagine...

Highlights included an incredible jam between two of rock music's all-stars: Sammy Hagar and the king of the electric guitar, Eddie Van Halen.

The show was filled with music about the plight of the farmer and the troubles he has endured and will continue to endure until something is done in Washington. One of the most memorable events of the "marathon concert for America" was the reading of a letter from a broken farmer in Wisconsin pleading for everyone's help in this fight for his farm and his children's future, and all farmers around the nation.

Sissy Spacek announced to the crowd, "I would like to introduce to you the man who planted the seed three weeks ago," then looking around the crowd and holding her arms out she said, "Look what it has grown into! Mr. Neil Young," Neil sung and reached the plight of the farmer in a way that grabbed ones heart and held it strong.

The show ended with "Uncle Willie," as he became affectionately known to the crowd, singing his rendition of Amazing Grace, followed by the single largest private fireworks show the world has ever seen. It was a lasting tribute to the largest gathering and sharing of the American spirit since the Bicentennial in 1776. It will be a fan piece down the road before we ever forget the weekend America rocked a marathon for the greatest and strongest symbol of our freedom, the American farmer.

Pledges are still being taken at the Farm Aid Headquarters. Do your part. Help your neighbor, put food on your plate. The greatest in music did theirs. 1-800-FARM AID.

LIGHTER SIDE

This past weekend a friend and I made a road trip to Cincinnati. We were fortunate enough to visit the zoo. (Oh boy!) Upon arriving at the zoo we were stampeded by a herd of kids going in 20 different directions. After peeling ourselves off the cement, we were stampeded by their parents who were chasing after them.

Our first stop was the penguin exhibit. I have heard these little critters have a social life similar to mine. After all, they only mate once a year you know. I thought we could compare notes on how to improve this most unfortunate situation.

After we left the penguins, we cruised by the hippos and rhinos, which instantly brought back memories of my date for the Sweethearts Dance last February. After a few moments of reminiscing and having a good laugh with my friends, we left for the ape house.

Once we were in the ape house, a friend who wishes to remain anonymous, (oh well, Danny Johnson), started to talk dirty to the apes and instantly felt right at home. They were in rare form with their humorous antics. They better be in rare form for as much as we paid to get into the place. If we wanted just a plain old zoo, we could have stayed here at Camp Marian.

As we were leaving the ape house, we suddenly heard a commotion coming from behind us. We turned around and saw a crazed, blazing eyes, zoo official chasing us. When he reached us, he apprehended Danny and told the rest of us to stand back and be careful, because the monkey could be dangerous. He then reprimanded us for trying to steal a monkey from the zoo. We tried to convince the official that Danny was really a human being, and not an animal, contrary to what we've heard. After much convincing, the official let Danny go, but told us to be careful next time, and to keep all animals on a leash.

This article was not meant to poke fun at Danny, it's just that he's so easy to pick on.

The Democratic and Republican Caucuses of the Indiana House of Representatives and the Senate will have several internships available for the 1986 General Assembly. Any undergraduate student is eligible for the experience. No specific major is required, but writing skills and a basic understanding of government and the legislative process are important.

Interns are expected to attend and staff committee meetings. They also analyze bill content at each step of the legislative process. Some of the other duties interns will be responsible for are compiling and processing bill data, conducting research on pending legislation, working in public relations, and attending to constituent casework.

Hours vary accordingly to the student and the particular caucus in which the student is an intern. Some of the internships require up to 37 to 40 hours a week; however, both political parties vary in both the Senate and the House.

Salary for interns has been set at $135 a week and counts as class credit. Any person interested in an application or information should contact Mr. William Doherty of the History Department, in room 203.

ASSOCIATESHIPS

The National Research Council announces the 1986 Resident, Cooperative, and Postdoctoral Research Associateship Programs for research in the sciences and engineering to be conducted in behalf of 25 federal agencies or research institutions, whose laboratories are located throughout the U.S. The programs provide Ph.D. scientists and engineers of unusual promise and ability with opportunities to perform research on programs largely of their own choosing yet compatible with the research interests of the supporting laboratory. Initiated in 1954, the Associateship Programs have contributed to the career development of over 4000 scientists ranging from recent Ph.D. recipients to distinguished senior scientists.

Approximately 350 new full-time Associateships will be awarded on a competitive basis in 1986 for research in: chemistry, earth and atmospheric sciences; engineering and applied sciences; biological, health and behavioral sciences; mathematics; space and planetary sciences; and physics. Most of the programs are open to both U.S. and non-U.S. nationals, and to both recent Ph.D. degree recipients and senior investigators.

Awards are made for one or two years; senior applicants who have held the doctorate at least five years may request shorter tenure. Stipends for the 1986 program year will begin at $26,350 a year for recent Ph.D.s and be appropriately higher for senior Associates. A stipend supplement approximately $5000 may be available to regular (not senior) awardees holding recognized doctoral degrees in those disciplines wherein the number of degrees conferred by U.S. graduate schools is significantly below the current demand. In the 1985 program year these areas have been engineering, computer science, space-related biomedical science.

Reimbursement is provided for allowable relocation costs for limited professional travel during tenure. The host laboratory provides the Associate with programmatic assistance including facilities, support services, necessary equipment, and travel necessary for the conduct of the approved research program.

Applications to the National Research Council must be postmarked no later than January 15, 1986 (April 15 and August 15, 1986. Initial awards will be announced in March and April (July and November for the two later competitions) followed by awards to alternates later.

Information on specific research opportunities and federal laboratories, as well as application materials, may be obtained from the Associateship Programs, Office of Scientific and Engineering Personnel, JH 408-D1, National Research Council, 2103 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20418, (202) 334-2760.

CAL STATE-SAN BERNARDINO FACES A HARE-Y PROBLEM

San Bernardino, CA (CPS) -- Officials at Cal State-San Bernardino have considered everything from installing electronic noise devices to spraying the grounds with hot sauce to drive away hordes of wild rabbits that are devouring campus greenery.

"Nobody has anything against them, but they hop all over campus and chew up the vegetation," explains Robert Lohnes, San Bernardino's assistant director of plant operations.

"It's impossible to come onto campus and not notice them running around," he says. "They co-mingle with students, they drink out of the campus water (hoses), and they love to uproot our grass."

Indeed, "this is a very dry, arid region of the state," says Jerry Rosen, spokesman for the San Bernardino Humane Society, "and the lush, green campus is probably very attractive to the rabbits."

Urban sprawl has driven the hares out of their natural grasslands and force them to feed off of local lawns and gardens, including spacious San Bernardino campus, Rosen says.

The same rural development pushed out much of the other wildlife that once preyed on the rabbits, causing the tremendous increase in the bunny population, adds Lohnes.

"Coyotes used to keep the number of rabbits down," he says, "but the area has built up so much that the predators have left, and the rabbits have it all to themselves. And they do proliferate you know."

Campus officials have been searching for a way to get the rabbits off campus without hurting them or interfering with the local ecosystem, Lohnes says.

"But so far, every option has either been flatly denounced by environmentalists or too expensive, or both."

At one time officials even considered dousing the campus greenery with hot sauce to make it distasteful to the rabbits.

"Well, there's certainly plenty of hot sauce here in southern California," jokes the Humane Society's Rosen. "And burning the bunnies' palates would certainly be preferable to using traps or poison to control them."

But officials later ruled out the hot sauce method because "it would be too expensive and only drive the rabbits into someone else's yard," says Lohnes.

"As of now, we still don't have any authority to touch the rabbits or do anything that would affect area wildlife," Lohnes says. "So right now you could just say we're practicing peaceful co-existance."

The local Humane Society also is looking into other control methods, spokesman Rosen says.

"But the ultimate solution is one that probably will never happen," he says. "And that's for us to be responsible enough to set aside areas that won't become parking lots and shopping centers, where the rabbits and other wildlife can live."
COLLEGE STUDENTS AMONG THE LONELIEST GROUPS IN AMERICA

Lincoln, NE (CPS) -- College students, particularly entering freshmen, are more lonely than virtually all other social groups except single parents, alcoholics, and some high school students, according to a researcher at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"We have been very surprised to learn that college students are one of the more lonely groups of people we've surveyed over the years," says John Woodward, UNL professor of human development, who has given his loneliness test to thousands of people -- including over 400 students -- over the past 20 years.

After asking respondents how they feel and behave in specific social situations, Woodward rates them on what he calls his "loneliness index."

The only people lonelier than entering freshmen, he says, are alcoholics, single parents, rural high school students and female, inner-city high schoolers.

"We believe that students are lonely for a good many reasons," Woodward explains. "Most of them have been uprooted from their family support systems, their life-long friends, and are searching to establish a new support system in a strange place among strange people."

In addition, he says, "college students are in a period when they have to make new decisions about all sorts of things -- committing themselves to college, building a philosophy of life, setting rules for moral behavior, what classes they will take -- and decision-making is a very lonely process."

"College is indeed a time of shaping and building for students," agrees Thomas Cummings, a counseling education specialist at Arizona State University.

"You can be in the middle of New York City and still be lonelier that if you were in Muncie, Indiana," he notes.

"And a student in the midst of a new campus can be surrounded by people all day, and still feel lonely because of the changes and decisions they have to make."

Loneliness, says UNL's Woodward, "is a very normal human condition, but it becomes a problem when it interferes with someone's ability to function."

For instance, unusually lonely students often can't study well, isolate themselves from social activities, and become depressed and withdrawn.

"But something as simple as a phone call home, joining a club or organization, or going to church can help students establish the new relationships and gain the self confidence they need to overcome their loneliness," Woodward says.

DRESS FOR SUCCESS

The Career Planning & Placement Office and the Home Economics Club are co-sponsoring a seminar to help students develop appropriate job skills.

The first part of the program will be presented by representatives from two clothing stores, Mr. Mike Kinghorn from Harry Levinson's and Ms. Judy Lister from Potpourri, who will discuss the proper attire to be worn for interviewing.

The second part of the program will be presented by two personnel representatives, Mr. Paul Elliott from C.F. Airriech and Mr. Donald DeHart from Trafalgar Elementary School, who will share the qualities they look for when meeting a potential job candidate.

We feel that this is a very important opportunity for any student who might be seeking employment in the next few years and of particular importance to graduating seniors.
