Felicetti announces plan

by Tina Kunkler

Doctor Daniel A. Felicetti outlined the second of his “four pilots of light;” governance, mission, planning and resources; at the Sept. 26 Open College Forum in Marian Hall Auditorium.

He suggested that the college, in doing all four pilots of light, build an institutional vita and a data book to lay out what the college is and what it is striv­ing toward.

Under mission, Felicetti spoke of renewal through mission and the writing of a new mission statement. He proposed three time-savers to achieve this goal: (1) Admittance that liberal arts and professional studies are interdependent. We ought not think that we can make it without one. Marian is a small “comprehensive liberal arts” college. (2) Celebration of both the Catholic tradition and the ecu-

Baseball team: victims respond

Regards to the story on the baseball team.
As reading the recent Carbon, we were extremely disturbed by the comment made by Coach Shambaugh: "the young men playing (baseball) this year are gentlemen...not renegades or troublemakers as some of Marian's baseball players were in the past."
We were not aware that the qualifications for a gentleman were the ability to consume alcohol, fight aggressively, or talk fictiously about others behind their backs. It is often stereo-typed that "girls" are always caught gossiping. One should be a blade of grass on the baseball field as the Marian gentlemen prepare for a game.
Because Coach Shambaugh has made these "young men" believe that they are "gentlemen" it has given them the right to walk all over people.
We believe Coach Shambaugh's comments were quite deceiving. As we first came to this school, we were warned about the infamous baseball players. We only wish we would have figured out sooner that these gentlemen are given the privilege to put other people to shame at their expense.
If the Marian baseball players are such gentlemen, maybe Coach Shambaugh should ask his young men where they are as I write this on a Monday night, October 2, at 11 p.m.
-- Victims of these Gentlemen

Alcohol Policy

What is a "regulated" event where alcohol is present? Either a campus is a "dry" campus or it is not one. There should be no grey area where the use of alcohol is concerned. By having "regulated" events where alcohol is present, the Student Board and the administration are sending mixed messages to the students of Marian College. It is okay to drink when the Student Board says it is, but not when the Student Board doesn't okay it? The idea that Marian College is or should be a dry campus really exists, in my opinion, to please the parents of residential Marian students, among others.
As far as the Student Board funding events where alcohol is present, almost every social event that Marian holds has alcohol at it, whether it is used before or after the event or during it. Almost anyone present at any social event would have to agree with that statement.
All I'm trying to point out with this letter is that there seems to be some major inconsistencies concerning the alcohol policy at Marian. The Student Board also doesn't have the power to properly regulate any alcoholic or non-alcoholic social events, even if they truly wanted to do so. If Marian were to allow alcohol on campus, it would stop students from driving off campus to party or sneak into bars with fake I.D.'s, which will only serve as negative publicity for Marian when someone is arrested or seriously injured in an alcohol influenced condition.

Gentlemen of the Past respond

Yesterday's Renegades??!!??!! Seemingly more write-ups for ALCOHOL... Two players fighting... EACH OTHER... As Fr. Bryan says, "GIVE ME A BREAK!"

Vandalism

Maybe I've just been lucky, or maybe people respect what's on a chapel bulletin board. In all the years that I have taken care of that bulletin board, no one has removed or otherwise desecrated anything I have had posted--until now! That St. Francis picture, purchased for the chapel bulletin board, went up at 10:45 on Sunday morning. By 8:30 a.m. on Monday, the picture had been ripped from its background and the ruined poster left behind.
If you really wanted a picture of St. Francis, I am sure that Fr. Bryan or Fr. Leopold or any sister on campus would be delighted to provide one for you. After all, St. Francis is our special patron.
I don't expect the picture to be returned; it is already ruined. I do pray, however, that the saint who had such respect for all things created will help you to respect what is there for all of us.

"I like the fact that there is always a teacher who is willing to help you, no matter what the problem," commented Sarah Back when asked what she liked best about Marian. The campus' small, family atmosphere influenced Back's college choice.

Back came to us from Brookville, Indiana. She is the youngest of five children, all of which have gone to Marian. While here, she has been active in intramural sports, tutoring other students, and she was her Junior class vice-president. Currently, she is president of the Accounting Society, vice-president of the Business Club and in her third year of being a resident assistant. Her hobbies include volleyball, crocheting and spending time with family and friends.

As a business and accounting major, Back plans on staying around the Indianapolis area after graduation and getting a job with an accounting firm.

Back states that the most influential person in her life has been her mother. "She is my best friend in the whole world," she says. Her only advice to the freshmen is, “Study hard, but make sure to make time for fun, because it is very important!”

There is a rumor circulating that freshmen campers will not be permitted to have their cars on campus. "If the campers are not driving their cars across campus to eat or to attend class, then they will not be taking up valuable parking spaces," said the Head Counselor. He feels that this should cut down on the parking problem at Camp M.

Freshman Sally Elephant feels that this is unfair treatment. "Why is he just singling out the freshman? Why not just make it no cars period on campus for everyone?" Senior Jill Raccoon feels, "I need my car for job interviews and for visiting friends on weekends, since there is nothing at Camp M to do on weekends."

Assistant Counselor Peter Cottonpatch feels that the campers need a degree of independence and mobility. Having a car which is registered, and properly licensed affords that to the campers. "Granted," Cottonpatch continued, "if the campers could learn how to walk across the camp for meals and for classes, then there probably would be no problems with parking. But since this is not the case, we will continue to have cars illegally parked in no parking zones, parked on the grass, and blocking other cars in."

Junior Phillip Antelope said, "Hey, why don't they reconfigure the buildings, class rooms, and parking. They could lay out all of the buildings in a big circle, and make the parking lots on the outside of the circle. In this way, the cars would circle the camp and everyone would be going around in circles."

MC theater season to open with Phedre

Marian College will open its mainstage season with Jean Racine's Phedre on Thursday, October 12. The French Neo-classic tragedy will be staged in Marian Hall Auditorium. It will run through Sunday, October 15; all performances are at 8 p.m. The Saturday evening performance will be preceded by a dinner in Allison Mansion.

Phedre was first produced in France in 1677. Some of the greatest actresses of all time have played the title role. In this production senior Cindy Kopeneck follows such luminaries as Sarah Bernhardt, whose Phedre was considered a landmark performance. The plot centers around Phedre's unlawful passion for her stepson, Hippolytus, played by Jerry Bessler. Dennis McKamey portrays Theseus, Phedre's warrior-king husband. Others in the cast include Regina Garza as Aricia, Hippolytus' true love, and Lance Waters as Theremenes, his tutor. Filomena Marshall is Ismene, Aricia's confidante, Kari Palma is Oenone, Phedre's nurse and Jennifer Wood is Panope, a waiting woman. Guards, Dan Dattilo, Sean Gallagher, Vito Viscuso and Dan Zielenski complete the cast.
Remainder: All students, faculty and staff must have parking stickers or be ready to pay the upcoming $20 tow away fee. Already this semester there have been approximately 100 of the $5.00 stickers put on cars that are illegally parked in areas not assigned for parking.

There is now parking available in front of St. Francis Hall, where the old gym was. It is gravel, but it is the parking for which we have been waiting. The back driveway of St. Francis, facing the baseball diamond will soon be marked as NO PARKING ANY TIME. Students are asked to get familiar with the front parking lot.

CC 19th at National Catholic Meet

The Marian cross country team finished 19th in the Tenth Annual National Catholic Cross Country Meet. Coach Dave Roberts was pleased at his runner's performances. One main reason for the strong finish was the outstanding performance given by number four runner Jason Bridwell (29:05). Bridwell took a minute off his time best yet this year. Marian also got their usual solid efforts by the top three runners: Brian Boyle (27:45), Brad Becker (28:36), and Aaron Graeb (28:37).

Roberts said he was happy with the team's finish, but also said that they could have finished 18th or possible 17th if he could have five solid men. "Right now, our lack of a solid fifth man is hurting us. We need someone to take control and be there by conference."

Ranked 15th nationally, Notre Dame edged number 2 Providence.

Next week, our Knightly cross country team will run at the Earlham Invitational.
New faces join faculty and staff

by Dallice Hesselgrave

Jill Merle, an instructor in Business Administration was a project engineer at Eli Lilly before coming to work at Marian College. Occasionally, she assumed the role of instructor at Lilly and she loved it, "I love being up in front of people."

When asked why she chose Marian, she said that Marian was a good place for a full-time instructor and that she looked forward to interaction with the students.

The avid Purdue fan is kept busy at home by a ten-month-old son. In her spare time, Merle likes to go for walks and go shopping. The Fort Wayne native related her most interesting vacation--a cruise in the Caribbean, "It was different than a normal vacation because you met and got to know a lot of different people." Merle is a graduate of both I.U. and Purdue.

While Assistant Professor of Accounting, Kevin Huston has taught part-time at IUPUI, this is his first full-time teaching position. The Notre Dame graduate came to Marian for a variety of reasons. Among them are that he and his wife would not have to move; he likes Marian's Catholic commitment, and the physical setting. Huston was also impressed by the people who interviewed him and the fact that people from other areas besides accounting and business wanted to be involved in the selection process.

The Muncie native commented, "It is a good time to be a new faculty member." He went on to explain that with a new president and other officials, he was glad to be coming in when the college was beginning a new era. With his background and business contacts, he hopes to generate more community interest in Marian.

The gregarious Huston was fortunate enough to be among twenty businessmen who travelled to the Netherlands to study. They stayed in Tilberg, where very few tourists gather, so the people were excited to see Americans. "They bent over backwards to help," commented Huston. It was really an outstanding experience.

Hurricane relief efforts in Indy

by Michelle A. Scheidt

For the past two weeks Marta Cruz, part-time professor in the Spanish department, has been working with the people of Indianapolis to send aid to Puerto Rican victims of Hurricane Hugo. A native of the hard-hit eastern seaboard of Puerto Rico, Cruz has spent countless hours organizing volunteer workers, making telephone calls, setting up meetings with key officials, and gathering supplies.

She misses her family and her people, especially in this time of need. She said, "I find myself far from home, too far away from home." But she is doing whatever she can to help; "All that I can do today is work in collecting material goods for the needy. I hope to touch their lives with hope, encouragement, and the beauty of our love."

To date, about 400 boxes of clothing, food, medicine, and household supplies have been packed. Money and items are still being collected, but Cruz is positive about the efforts thus far: "I am grateful and happy because of the response we have gotten."

The Puerto Rican towns most affected by Hugo are Ceiba, Fajardo, Luquillo, and the islands of Vieques and Culebra. In these areas 85 percent of the structures, including homes, were completely destroyed. Virtually all trees are gone. The people are without power, water, and telephone.

The American Red Cross, the National Guard, and the Navy have aided relief efforts, but problems continually arise. There is a shortage of machinery for removing debris. Government funding for the homeless is limited. Hygiene is also a problem due to lack of water and the great number of dead animals.

"I hurt today to know that only time and nature's rebirth will bring life to the soil and to the people," Cruz said.

"I am anxious to visit my birth place, my town, and all my people," she said. In the meantime, she is making great contributions towards helping them by her efforts here in the city. She said, "I want to be part of the reconstruction of the country."
ARA new management team

by Beth Peter

Two new faces on the Marian campus are those of Nadeem Siddiqui and Leroy Mosley. Both are employed by ARA Food Services.

Siddiqui is assistant director of Food Service. He is originally from Pakistan, but has lived in the United States since 1982. He felt he would have a better chance at getting a good job with a U.S. education. He earned a bachelor of science degree in economics at Pakistan and attained a bachelor's degree in Hotel/Restaurant Management from Moorehead State University in 1986.

He has previously worked as a cash operations manager/unit manager at Concordia College. Other positions include trainee manager, catering and banquet supervisor, student manager, weekend line supervisor and night manager.

Siddiqui hopes to attain a master's degree in business administration and eventually return to his home in Pakistan. He has been at Marian for a month and feels he is getting a great experience, "The people are really nice. The students are a good crowd."

Siddiqui likes to play raquetball in his spare time and said that if anyone is interested in playing some games, they should contact him.

Leroy Mosley and Nadeem Siddiqui

Leroy Mosley is the food production manager with ARA. He is originally from St. Louis, Mo. He has lived in Indianapolis with his wife for 30 years. Mosley has worked with Grand Valley University in Michigan, the William H. Blocks Co. and Indiana Central University. The positions he has held include manager, assistant manager and executive chef. Mosley thinks Marian is a good college and enjoys working with the people.

"I enjoy feeding the students," said Mosley. "If things are not to their satisfaction, they can see me and I'll try to do what I can to help them out."

Editorial

by Tina Kunkler

Lord, make me an instrument of thy peace. The opening line of the prayer of St. Francis, the patron saint of the Franciscan community which founded the Marian College community expresses, in eight simple words, a way of life sought after by many.

In addressing the Lord, the plea recognizes His power. It asks a specific being for help. The request realizes a personal need within the self.

As an instrument, one opens his or her heart to the work of the Lord, inviting Him to operate through and with him or her. He or she, in some way dedicates a part of his or her life to the work of God. This dedication can be marked in several ways. The religious wear specific garb or pins, rings, or pendants to note their devotion. But the life of the person best expresses that dedication; the action and attitude speak softly but influence deeply.

Not only the work, but also a joy permeates that belief. A comfort lies in knowing that someone is always there. An inner strength can be found by opening oneself to belief.

What type of instrument do I want to become? I want to become an instrument of thy peace; peace that can be lived by each of us; peace that connects us with the world around us to build community. I am looking for a peace that facilitates growth within individuals and creeps into our public lives.

Lord, make me an instrument of thy peace.

Marian College President welcomed to the Circle City

Fire & Tornado Drills

BE READY!! It's here and it will awaken you in your deepest sleep and break your chain of thought while you are studying. It will be annoying and boring at times. But it's for your own good. Students, faculty and staff should get ready for the new "Catastrophic Disaster Program," a new name for the old fashioned "fire drills."

There will be more fire drills and tornado sirens going off on campus as the Emergency Procedure Committee puts the program into action in the near future— and some students may have already experienced the drills. Marian College is being updated for catastrophic disasters with help from the State of Indiana, the Marion County Civil Defense and City Management.

Be on the lookout for new notices being put on every door in the 14 buildings and also in the classrooms. The Emergency Procedures Committee (Connie Wesner, Bill Elliot, William H. Woodman, Don Fleming, Dave Roberts, and all of the R.A.'s and R.D.'s are helping the committee too) is getting Marian College ready to face any disaster that comes our way.

The more frequent drills may be bothersome and loud at times, but someday it may save students' lives.

The puzzle solution may be found on page 7.
