Tonight: March 5 - 8:30 p.m. - Blood Sweat and Tears at the Coliseum.

Saturday, March 6, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Education Meeting, Sisters of St. Francis in the M.H. Auditorium, SAC and Library Auditoriums, and several classrooms. 8:00 p.m. Clare Hall Film: The Sterile Cuckoo (but rumor has it through the courtesy of a little bird that instead of that show another one has come in its place - The Shoes of the Fisherman). I'm sure the story, plot, and characteristics will be similar to the former so at least go and find out. Besides as an added attraction there'll be two short films - one starring Valentino (a biggie of our time) and Mae West. It's in the MH Auditorium. At 11:30 p.m. (approximately) Peace Mass in the Chapel.

Sunday March 7 - 1:45 p.m. Alumni Science Day Room 355. 6-12 p.m. M.C. Review Rehearsal in the M H Auditorium.

Monday, March 8 - Student Teaching begins. 7:00 p.m. Marian Lecture: Existentialism - John Kraus. Get there early or else all the seats will be taken in Room 215. At 8:00 p.m. the Civilisation Series: Protest and Communication in the M H Auditorium. 8:15 Marian Lecture: Current Topics in Biology - Dr. Max S. Norris, in Room 157.

Tuesday, March 9 - 10:30 a.m. Psychology Lecture. At noon - Faculty Council Meeting. At 12:30 p.m. Civilisation Series: Protest and Communication, in the M H Auditorium. At 7:00 p.m. Internship Program in the Visitors' Lounge.

Wednesday, March 10 - 11:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. Pleasure for Caps and Gowns in Visitors' Lounge (does that sound like an order, if you don't think so see what happens if you show up in the Auditorium on May 30 without one.). 7:00 p.m. Pre-marriage talks and discussion in Room 306. Also at 7:00 p.m. an Educational Film Series - Tonight we have Film as Art Form and Shape of Films to Come (Includes new types of camera devices, Activities (cont. from page 1) screens, and a plan to allow the audience to vote on the ending of a film.) Shown in the Library Auditorium, 7:00 p.m. Marian Lecture:
Piano Instruction - Sr. Vivian Rose Morshouser, in the Music Mansion. 7:30 - 10:00 p.m.

If Jwun Tu Jwazuri could have taken advantage of the Artie Expedition the Courtly Few went on, they might have become the first team in Marian College Intramural History to successfully defeat a prior championship. But they didn't, so the issue has been decided and the Courtly Few are the new Champs, in intramural basketball.

The Courtly Few took 21-14 half-time lead. But at the beginning of the second half, they went on an unbelievable nine minutes without scoring a point. Luckily for them, Jwun Tu Jwazuri scored only eight points in the same period. After that, the Few caught fire, hit, and rebounded well and walked off with a 39-31 victory.

Why, tell me
Why there are so many pimentos
in the Cafeteria.
Pimentos in the corn, Pimento soup
Pimento casserole
and what about that pink lemonade. Why are we being overrun by the pimento pimento otherwise known as the red menace plague. Pimento people beware these are surplus pimento from the government and they contribute to the war effort. We are being overrun by pimentos, Pimentos to the left of us especially to the left of us. Stand up for your pimento Stop the war.

Who owns a college? If this is not an entirely absurd question, then, any real answer would have to include all of these elements: the legal institution (religious foundation, corporation, state, the taxpayers, the alumni, the students, the faculty, and the community. The question of whose priorities will be placed first is quite probably a simple question of power. Each element has its own interests and frequently these interests are in conflict with each other. The students and the community lie on the bottom of that power spectrum. The student struggle in asserting their interests is infamous (especially for students). But the claim that the community can make to the resources of the learning institution is too often ignored; ignored by the legal institution whose concerns are with the smooth running of the college and with the relevant statistics; ignored by the alumni attached to the college by fond memories and by their status as benefactors; ignored by the faculty who deal, at best, with their students and less importantly, with their subjects; and the students are either too concerned with their own struggle or they have lost faith in the college's ability to benefit anyone, let alone, the community.

But the claim of the community to participate in some of the informational wealth of the learning institution is a valid one and cannot be disputed. The relationship of the community with the college is symbiotic - both exist to benefit one another. Traditionally, the college has offered little more than "cultural" occasions to the community. This is the case particularly with smaller institutions that cannot offer "continued education" type courses.

REACT, the now defunct Marian "free university", served as a complement to the education the student could receive from the college formal. There is an opportunity in the resurrection of REACT to serve not only the students once more, but also to extend itself to the surrounding community. This is the case particularly with smaller institutions that cannot offer "continued education" type courses.

"Nursery School" working with the Education Department on a credit basis, could establish a permanent, licensed day school. Possibly funded partly thru Work-Study, the savings would be passed on to the lower class mothers who wish to work.

"Community Organization" with the help of the successful U.S.C.O. (United Southside Community Organization) could help organize community interest groups for a wider and more effective political power base. REACT could thus establish itself as a community resource center. It could be made a reality by active and careful soliciting thru local existing neighborhood centers, churches, and schools. The formal college, by its support and help, could further fulfill the obligation it has to the community. It is past time to re-act REACT.

It would be very helpful if those students who change their home or local address during this semester should forward the list of recruiters who are scheduled to be on campus in the near future:

March 8 (Monday) - Mr. Charles Hertel, State Farm Insurance
March 12 (Friday) - Mr. Dick Wiley, Civil Service, 9:30-3:30
March 17 (Wed.) - Provident Mutual Insurance
March 18 (Thurs.) - Travelers Insurance
March 17 (Wed.) - Acacia Mutual, Mr. Neal Howe
March 18 (Thurs.) - Miss Chirstine Lindsay, Burke Marketing Research, Inc.
March 23 (Tuesday) - Provident Mutual Insurance Co., Mr. Curtis Robinson

Interested students can schedule an interview by coming to the Student Services Office or calling Extension 262.

Notice:

Anyone interested in advanced swimming instruction (free) be at the indoor pool at 7:00 Wednesday or call 942-0218.

Look Out for Jody...
In reply to W. Patskanick’s letter in the last issue of the Carbon, all I can say is this: Grow up, man, it’s ideas like yours that are making our society sick. Sure, it’s of your own concern how you can spend your free time, but when those thrills from life start interfering with the rights of others, then it is the concern of others.

If you want to attend wrestling matches, fine, but as for committing acts of vandalism and theft and breaking rules, these are not just for your own personal business, though you may think so. You’re offending yourself and also your fellow man and that is other people’s business.

Even when you’re blowing your mind with illegal narcotics, you’re hurting not only yourself, but your family and friends. You may say that it is none of their business, but where do you draw the line? If everyone goes his own separate way thinking only of himself, what would happen to our society? Society is comprised of people and maybe the reason it is in a sad shape today is because too many of us are selfish, apathetic, uninvolved and inconsiderate of others. Maybe if we think less about ourselves and more about others, society would not be in the state that exists now.

Out of Darkness

Dark out there ain’t it kid?
Can’t see a damn thing
Pretty quiet too ain’t it kid?
But your mind’s still ticking, Ticking, Ticking, finally reaching
That second before...
Still wondering, thinking, questioning
what’s really out there Knowing they’re waiting, watching Hoping the daylight will never come Hoping that you’ll be left in that condition
Of Blackness, Unknowingness, Sightlessness
That surrounds you, envelops you, Strangles you, until
That second before...
It will come through
It has come through Forcing those forgotten holes
To allow its entrance
To lead, to find a new direction to Make the light eternal
As it should be
Remember that kid,
That second before
You Explode!!

oh

od, the splendor of the afternoon, splashing
radiante sunlite o’er the decks of my cruiser, situated on oh-glorious SAC Mall.
Monumental in design, the threeStory brick-and-chicken-wire edificates, and sucks, pulling all it holds into the gasp/grasp of Neanderthalia.

oh, happy divergence! Screaming silence of the peck-a-peck-a-peck-apeacka-pecapeca-aa is interrupted by me–dic streams of ass- and/or dis- onance as
p. piper works his ways (a la drume ande bugle).
Strains of Odysseus in Space
asphalt circumscrption
deep chasms in the walls
sneering radiators
floors that slant–

oh, surely, this is not the real world.
