Lettuce Boycott

A few years and the United Farmworkers organized a successful grape boycott because of which contracts were negotiated between growers and workers. But large numbers of farm workers remain unionized, and the living conditions of most migrant farm workers remain deplorable.

Fact: 90% of farmworker children never reach high school. (U.S. Senate Hearings)

Fact: 49 years was the average life-span of the migrant worker in the U.S. in 1970. (U.S. Dept. of Labor)

Fact: Farmworkers on the average are not paid the federal minimum hourly wage.

Total farm labor yearly earnings are below the Federal poverty level. (Dept. of Labor)

Fact: Infant and maternal mortality rates were 125% higher than the national rate among migrant workers who rarely enjoy medical insurance benefits. (1967)

Lettuce workers represent another large segment of farmworkers, yet only 15% of the industry is now UFW. A mere 2 cents more per head of lettuce could double the salary of a lettuce worker. But there will be no significant increases in salaries unless the worker is allowed to organize and negotiate for better living conditions. For that reason the United Farmworkers has renewed its lettuce boycott.

Ron Morgan is only receiving UFW lettuce in the cafeteria so eat up. But you can support the boycott in other ways. There is an organization in Indy which is promoting the boycott. They will be trying to leaflet and solicit pledges on the Circle both before and after the Christmas rush. If you would like to help at the Circle or would like to leaflet at your own convenience at the place of your choice, call, Chris Schneider, 615 E. 40th St., Indpls, IN 46205

Background discussions are scheduled every Sunday at 3:00 pm for those wanting more info. If you are interested, call, Bernie Survil, 1416 N. Meridian Indpls, IN 46202

The same kind of a meeting is scheduled for Tuesday evenings, Dec. 9 at 12 Holy Cross Community Center (125 N. Oriental, the 300 block east between Washington and New York. The Center is behind the Church, off the parking lot in the basement rooms.) Confirm your attendance by calling Bernie Survil at the number above.

The Farmworkers need your help.

Due to the cancellation of Classes on Dec. 5th, there will be no Carbon on that date. Also due to the lack of money and abundance of exams there will be no Carbon on Dec. 15. However, for all the Carbon Freaks, we will have our first annual special Christmas - end of the calendar year - issue on Mon. Dec. 11.

All this depends on the Duplication Office's willingness to break tradition and print the Carbon on Monday, if not so disregard this note.

From the Masses:

Student members of Self-Study and Faculty Council Committees:

For the past two years the Self-Study Commission has been reviewing every phase of this institution, both of present and for the future. Most of the subcommittees have completed their reports and have submitted them to the Steering Committee. However, the Faculty Affairs and Governance Committees have submitted several alternatives concerning their areas. These areas include: the complete governance structure of the institution, general education requirements and divisional structure.

On Tuesday, December 5 and Thursday December 7 from 12:00 - 1:30 pm, there will be information sessions concerning these alternative plans in Rm. 251. Explanation of each plan and the ramifications each may have will be discussed along with any questions that are raised. As members of the various Self-Study Commissions and subcommittees and Faculty Council Committees, we have been selected as the student representatives who will vote on these plans. I would like to emphasize the extreme importance of these sessions and the voting. The entire organization of the institution will be affected by the results.

This Sunday, Dec. 3 at 7:30, the Student Board will be discussing these same plans, especially how they affect student government. You are encouraged to attend all these meetings.

the Priest's Wife

mariam Hall Auditorium
To the people,

Recently a proposed Alcoholic Beverage Policy was composed by concerned students. A student referendum showed a large majority favored the proposal. It is now making its comeback route through the hierarchy, and a decision will eventually be handed down. Not having attained legal age as of yet, this policy will have little effect on me directly. However, I feel that it is my duty to support some decisive stand.

Foreseeably, the most controversial issue is the proposed allowance of drinking within the dormitory. It is natural to assume that the college, never before known to endorse illicit behavior, would impose the necessary compliance with the state law—which bestows the privilege of consumption of alcoholic beverages upon those 21 years of age and older.

Undoubtedly, this will raise apprehensions immediately in the eyes of some faculty and administrative members. Perhaps they may feel that their reservations are well-founded, but I must admit that I do not understand them. Viewing the situation realistically and practically, all involved must concede that alcoholic beverages are accessible to any person who so chooses at the legal age or not. Therefore, I do not see how the proposed policy would increase the present influx of the evil brew. Perhaps this is a sad statement to have to make, but it is true. Obviously, the tight little cocoon which college administrators have endeavored to spin around us has become unwound. And rightly so. The college wishes to assume them a lofty position of authority in loco parentis; I maintain that students attend college for two purposes. The first and foremost is academic development; the second is the formulation and embracement of personal social attitudes. Therefore I feel that the present school policy, which is unaligned with the accepted social and legal standards, is unreasonable and therefore open to disrespect.

If I were a student of the legal age, I would feel that the administration is doing me a great injustice by placing stipulations on my capacity for judgement. By eliminating my privilege of drinking which the state has accorded me, they eliminate any decision on my part. I would feel great insult in the undermining of my rational powers by the administration. It should be the aim of the educational institution to nurture the growth of mature independence. From this will hopefully emanate self-respect, and upon this will our futures lie.

STUDENT BOARD

The Student Board will meet this Sunday at 7:30 in the Social Council Room.

PIT PREVIEWS

PIT MAN OF THE WEEK: Featuring:

Alexander Dorko, the Don Juan of Inner Sanctum, wins the 'Brass Buckles' Award for his finesse in backdooring J.S. in a reel down to the wire voting to gain the "Pit Men" Recognition.

"Dorky," appropriately fit right into the Homecoming theme with his hot rod Chevy, and dancing never before witnessed by man or beast.

The "Pit" congratulates such a fine showing, we are truly proud to say, "Hey the Bird of Paradise let his gift fall upon you." FUN—LAUGHTER—PURE NAUSEA! A new Pit Man every week.

M.E.M.

The rumor of the week is that the cafeteria "hamburger" is 100% beef. It might be better if it was soybean.

WAA Volleyball

All the displays of skill, expertise, and sportsmanship brought Women's Intramural Volleyball to a conclusion when Monday night Mezuri aptly defended their title by defeating Cagan's Gangsters and retaining their championship. The team showed co-operation and spirit throughout the season as game after game Mezuri continuously stomped their opponents while experiencing defeat only once.

Going into the playoff, each team had suffered one loss and 16 wins. The difference and deciding factor in the final competition was the emotional state of the teams. Cagan's Gangsters were tense (their first playoffs!) as they took their starting positions before numerous fans while Mezuri remained calm, sure of their ability to defeat the Gangsters as they had done previously. Even though both squads had kept the same members as last year's team Mezuri had the feeling of confidence the Gangsters lacked. Due to this fact, the outcome was disastrous for the Gangsters.
