The views in this publication are those of the individual writer and do not necessarily reflect those of Marian College.
Carbon: In the April 16 issue of the Phoenix, you stated you were no longer interested in dorm life anymore. Is that true?

Laynor: No, that's totally untrue. I never quite stated it that way. What I said was that I'm not interested in this particular job, in this particular dorm, but I am very interested in dorm life. I intend to pursue a job similar to this, one at a higher professional level.

Carbon: Did you also really state that the faculty here is narrow minded?

Laynor: I never quite said it like that, I said that many of the administrators and faculty often look at things in a narrow way and that they should expand their thoughts in a broader area. But I never made a general statement that the faculty are narrow minded, although, some are. However, there are also some very highly qualified faculty here.

Carbon: Why was one of the R.A.'s at Doyle not retired for next year?

Laynor: This was based on a situation that occurred when some students related incidents that this R.A. had done in the dorm which they felt were not proper for the position of R.A. Subsequently, after much deliberation between the R.A. and Dean Woodman, he was asked not to return for next year.

Carbon: Do you agree with Dean Woodman's decision?

Laynor: I support his decision in the sense that he made a logical decision based on what was known to him. But I personally disagree with the final decision. I feel this R.A. had done a good job with a few mistakes. Everyone makes mistakes and they grow personally and professionally from those mistakes. I do disagree with the decision, but I can understand in the way that it was brought about. It was not a quick or spontaneous decision. There was a great deal of thinking and a great deal of dialogue. The R.A. was given every chance to present his side of the story, but I think in line with the total picture the decision was based strictly on facts, and sometimes decisions have to be based more on looking at the total picture; the potential and the basic character of a person. Not just the basic facts, but on the total way a person deals with his particular job.

Carbon: You said before the R.A. involved was a good R.A. Why do you believe so?

Laynor: Because I believe he was not only well liked by the students, but respected. He had a good rapport and he met most of my expectations of what an R.A. should be. Granted, he made a few mistakes, but every person in every job makes mistakes. In total, I feel he did a good job.

Carbon: What do you think is good about Marian College?

Laynor: Nothing... no just kidding. I feel the college in being so small, offers a person a very close knit environment where he can get to know other people. The student has a great deal of interaction, not only with his peer group but with the faculty and administrators as well. Here a person can get to know faculty and administrators on a personal level as well as a professional level. There is a great opportunity for professional and academic growth among students. I also think that the people at this school are very friendly and sincere. The students are willing to go out of their way to help other people. There is a lot of good potential at this school. I think when most people come to this campus, they leave with a very favorable impression and I think that is due, in a large way, to the students. They offer a very friendly and congenial relationship to outsiders as well as themselves. That has a lot to say about the school.

Carbon: What do you think is bad about Marian College?

Laynor: Well, I think there is a feeling among some administrators, possibly faculty too, of how a school should be, which is not in line with reality. By that, I mean the direction schools and society are going today. Maybe it's narrow mindedness in some aspects.

The things I disagree with are some of the rules we have. Taking away some of the rules would make it a little more informal and create a better atmosphere. We have some rules which are not realistic with student feelings. The school is lacking in some areas—offering and student activities, but that's because of budgets.

Carbon: In your opinion, do the sisters affect life at Marian College?

Laynor: I definitely do feel that they have somewhat of an indirect effect on the basic philosophy of the school. Naturally, a school that is church affiliated, will aim to follow some of the basic guidelines. But sometimes their philosophical feelings may effect some of the rules in which rules are made and carried out. Their basic feelings are carried into some of the thoughts of the students and it is possibly a repression of free thought.

Carbon: Are all the rumors that circulate around Marian College about Doyle Hall true?

Laynor: Definitely Not! There are a lot of rumors which are exaggerated. For example, the beer can that is blown up into a leg; and the one joint that is blown up into a dope orgy. But, there is some basis for these rumors. We can't deny that there is drinking and stuff going on in the dorm. We can't policeman and find these things all the time. When we are encountered with violations, we act upon them. Definitely though, the rumors are over exaggerated. Doyle has always had a reputation of being much worse than it is. People thrive on rumors. Many people enjoy telling rumors, and naturally people enjoy hearing them. But things are not as bad as the rumors lead one to believe.

Carbon: What do you think of Dean Woodman?

Laynor: Basically, I have a high regard for him on both a personal and professional level. I think he definitely has the interest of the students in mind; he's done a lot of good things for this school. I have a positive feeling for him. We've had, along the lines, some basic disagreements about how certain things should be done concerning such things; as possible discipline. I think he does not come across as well as he would like to sometimes. But basically, I do have a high regard for him and I respect him very much as a Dean of Students.

Carbon: What kind of a disagreement have you had with him?

Laynor: There's a matter of confidentiality, so I won't go into this too much. As an example, we've had disagreements concerning discipline in some areas. Not basic disagreements, we generally agree along the same lines, but to what degree things should be carried out, to the extent of pursuit of a potential violation.

Carbon: Do the students at Marian College react favorably to Dean Woodman?

Laynor: As I mentioned before, I think he has a hard time coming across to students. I think they misread him many times. There was some incidents in the dorm concerning visitation violations which made it bad for him. And the whole thing was based on rumors and people didn't really know what happened. Also, his position. Many times he has to take a stand which will offend many students.

Carbon: Is the new Judicial Panel a fair system of adjudication?

Laynor: I definitely think it is. I think it's better than the old system, and it really does give the student the most opportunity to present his case. In talking with some students who had been through the judicial system, they feel that it was definitely fair, that it was probably the best system we could have up to this point. So I definitely feel it is a positive factor on this campus.

Carbon: What do you think the future holds for Marian College?

Laynor: I think that all depends on the people who are hired for these positions. I think it also depends on how the college structures itself in the future. Basically, the way things look now, the financial

Hey, all you worn out, drag out Marian associates—(Victims of the Care-A-Thon, papers, finals, etc.)—it is that time again. It has been over 6 weeks since you last gave blood, so you can give again! We still need 25 more pints to fulfill our quota for this year, and we are going to do it!!!!

The Blood Bank is not coming out here again for this year because we did so well the first time. It's located at 29th and Meridian, about a 10 minute drive, give or take a few minutes, depending on your driving ability. It is open from 8:30 a.m. everyday except Saturday and Sunday. Let me tell you the atmosphere can't be beat. It makes the old study lounge look like a dungeon.

As far as times goes, it takes about 1/2 hours from the time you leave your room to re-entry, again depending on your driving ability.

For those of you who haven’t caught on yet, go round up a few friends and a car, truck on down to the blood center, and save a life. Remember, NO drugs, alcohol (right before) and no milk products (4 hours before). Take ID. If you need transportation, contact me—Ext 534 and something will be arranged.

Until next year—Deb Kramer

STUDENT BOARD REPORT

A student board meeting was held Sunday, April 20, 1975.

It was the first meeting of the new MCSA officers. They are as follows:

President Bill Platt
V. President Paul Laufer
Secretary Vickie Hennessey
Treasurer Jon Driscoll
Academic Affairs Deb Lauer
Student Services John Klemm
Comm. on Social Planning Sue Stollenwerk

Reports
Student Services... The present guest hour policy was passed for 1975-76.
V. President... The editors for 1975-76 publications are:
Carbon Paul Laufer and Karole Armon
DARK Room Mark Triewiler
Fioretti Pat Paquin and Rita Druik
Phoenix Bob Melevin and Judy Dziezak
Yearbook Jackie Thiising and Renee Grantowski

President... Students are needed to fill positions on the following committees for 1975-76.

Athletics
Academic
Financial If Interested, contact any Student Board member
Library
Non-West
Program
Religious
Student Affairs
Teachers Ed.
Committee on Committees
Faculty and Staff Affairs

The Board of Trustees voted down the proposal for student representation. In it's place, the Trustees offered a new proposal. The alternate plan suggests having a student rep sit on the Student Services Committee of the Board of Trustees. The Rep would be able to address the Trustees on any student related topic. The proposal suggests that an agenda be sent to the Student Board at least one week prior to the Board of Trustees meeting and that minutes of the meetings be made available to the Student Board.
