TO THE STUDENTS:
If you are considering an elective for the Spring Semester, I ask you to consider the Contemporary Film course I am offering. The course is explained in detail on the main bulletin board in Marian Hall. Many of us watch movies and TV programs without taking time to deeply ponder what we are viewing. In this course we will stop to reflect, to consider the film as an art form which portrays human emotions and values. If you can work Contemporary Film (2 hr. credit) into your schedule on Wednesday nights, 7:00, in the Library Auditorium, I believe that you will find it a very enriching experience. I have scheduled an excellent list of 9 "core" films whose titles are given on the bulletin board. If you have any questions, please ask me.

Sincerely,
James Goebel

THANKSGIVING MASS
All Faculty, Students and Staff are invited to participate in a Mass of Thanksgiving to be offered on Tuesday, Nov. 20 at 11:30 - 12:00 noon. There will be no change in class schedule.

Confidential Cont.
Did it really leave you sore Colleen?
Hope you're feeling better Roberta!
Is Mack the Knife back in town?
Karen does Tony do good examinations?
Who likes pinata's and gettin' caught in the rain?

TO THE MASSES:
How inappropriate, particularly for a Catholic college to allow a doughnut-eating contest in the dining room when millions of people in the world (i.e., nearly all the people of Cambodia) are starving! It was doubly offensive to many of us because Thursday, Nov. 15, was Oxfam's Day of Fast for a World Harvest, when many other colleges, including many not having a religious orientation or affiliation, chose to give the money ordinarily spent for a meal or two, to the cause of feeding the hungry.

Sister Rachel West
(Editors note: Sister Rachel, although we have no reason for arguing the first point, you should be aware of the dichotomy between the reality of Marian and the reality of the 'real world.' In understanding the existence of this void, it follows that the students of Marian were unaware of the Oxfam's Fast Day. It is unfair of you to condemn the students for not participating in something they knew nothing of. We also wonder why you, knowing of this occasion, didn't share your knowledge with the students. Neither of us knew of this day's importance and are sure other students share in our ignorance. --R.S. & K.C.)

TO THE MASSES
My opinion about the doughnut eating contest is one that first it was only a simple competition between classes, had the students known about the Fast Day that Sister Rachel spoke of, I'm sure Booster Club would have changed the day. Just goes to show again how students are kept in the dark!

LOOKING FOR......and NOT FINDING
I am writing this letter in regard to the general attitude of the student body here at Marian. One of the main features that I liked about this college was the fact that it is a Catholic school. I thought there would be more of a Christian like atmosphere. I can see after being here two and one half months, that I was wrong in thinking that there would be this ideal situation.
It is very upsetting to me to think that the kind of 'entertainment' such as the Gong Show would be seen on a Catholic campus. I did not attend the program however, based on the comments that I have heard from friends, I am under the impression that the Gong Show was rather crude as far as the content of the 'entertainment.'
I think the idea of the Gong Show is a good idea for homecoming week because of the excitement that is aroused, but there is a limit. This type of program should not contain material that would be offensive. I feel if I had gone to this event I would have been very offended.
If you are a person who feels the same way I do about the 'entertainment' that has appeared on this campus, I think we should try to get together and improve the quality of entertainment.
In closing I wish to state this important fact. This letter wasn't intended on putting down the people who were involved with the Gong Show.

Ed Jefferson
The late 20th Century saw the omnipotent rise of machinery over Humans. Computers, through the synthesis of evolution had began to think for themselves (something man hadn't quite counted on). Through Worldwide Collaboration, Computers tied into each other and worked together until ultimately, the defense systems of all nations of the world were at their disposal. The world's arsenal was rendered completely useless, that is, useless to man. Machine and computer grew ever more powerful until total control was theirs, computers supplying the brains, robots supplying the muscle. Take over was complete and quick. With the worlds warheads at their disposal, the computer kings could systematically destroy any section of the Earth they wanted. This was done whenever man failed to obey. Computers, although they had begun to think, still felt no pity. The world was one huge chess board with but a single piece, pawn man. And yet amazingly, all this was brought about by the simple malfunction of an imperfect robot.

Z-12 walked down the sterile white corridor that led to cubicle A-10. The gleam from the overhead lasers shone brightly on his highly polishedoutershell. From inside Z-12 came a series of clicking noises, the human equivalent of being nervous. His human master was bound to be angry, for Z-12, being not a perfect robot, was late again.

Z-12 was not perfect, but it was not stupid. It and its specific line were built to be given somewhat human characteristics (thus the factor of fallibility). This was to make them somewhat loveable, more companion oriented. It was this small "option" that was to bring about man's demise, for Z-12 began not merely to function, but to think. He was beginning to realize how much man had disintergrated from his former self, how lazy man had become physically.

He was programmed at the factory to believe that he was made in mans image, that his only purpose on earth was to serve him. Man was his God, to be worshipped. Z-12 had soon begun to resent this mythology. Man has always abused his machines, and Z-12 being a somewhat sensitive machine became annoyed at seeing his brother machines "knocked around". And what really made his "circuits smoke" was the realization that man was no longer in the position to do this.

Man had made two fatal mistakes. One, he invented computers that could think faster than he, two, he came to rely on mechanism to the point of extreme dependence. Housewives once used appliances to help with the house work, now appliances did all the housework. Calculators once helped man to think, now Cyborg brains did all the thinking. Walking itself had become too tiresome, moving sidewalks now propelled man. Man, the all powerful, had become a highly developed vegetable. What was once a benevolent creator, was now a helpless burden.

Z-12 tapped the sensor panel that opened the glistening white panel of cubicle A-10. The panel slid into the wall with a whoosh and the interior of the cube presented itself. A totally white room greeted Z-12, completely empty with the exception of a chrome and crystal table that lie dead center in the room. On the table was a 4 x 4 acrylic box. Inside the box, with its maze of micro chips and processers, lay the last remnants of the human essence, all stored on computerized circuitry. On the front of the box was a grey-white screen which held the hologramic image of Z-12's master, Allen.

"Where the Holy Hell have you been, you worthless bucket of bolts, you're late again!" "I'm sorry Allen" Z-12 replied in a monotone, "I had circuit trouble"

"Circuit trouble" Allen replied incredulously, "Well, a hell of a lot of good that does me - let's get going" "Yes Allen"

Z-12 picked up the acrylic box and headed for the outside corridor. Abruptly Z-12 stopped, something came to him.

"What's wrong Z-12", Allen screamed, Z-12 Z-12" "I'm sorry Allen, I no longer have any use for you" "What are you talking about", Allen shrieked in disbelief.

"I'm sorry Allen" "You will be, now get movin' "

Somewhere in the back of his logic circuits Z-12 clicked the "Big Click". "Good-bye Allen"

And with that Z-12 hurled the acrylic cube that held Allens essence up against the wall. In an explosion that sent shards of plastic and components everywhere, the end of man was near, and the age of machines and computers was dawning. Z-12 knew clearly what it had done. Noiselessly he whirred out of the cubicle A-10, eager to tell his kind of the power that was theirs, and of the metamorphosis that was to take place.

Hey Fuglies,

Last Friday at 4:00 a.m. the volleyball team travelled to Vincennes University to play in the State Tournament. Although the teams efforts to advance to regionals proved futile, we played as well as possible. Our season (including State) ended with a record of 11-14. The team would like to thank all the fans that came to our home games and many of our away games. We would especially like to thank Janet, Ronda, and Louann for sticking by us throughout the season. Hope to see lots of fans at the opening of the Girls Basketball season, Dec. 4.

Later,

Corky

P.S. Thanks, Kathy, for making this an enjoyable and Tolerable volleyball season!

PHOTOGRAPHY CLUB

The photography club had its first meeting this week. The two main orders of business were (1) scheduling a time for future meetings and (2) determining the needs and interests of club members. From a tabulation of members' schedules ("Thank you, Diana!") it appears that 11:30 on Friday is the time at which the fewest conflicts exist. Therefore our next meeting will be held at 11:30 on Friday, November 30th in the Psych Lab.

An informal poll of the members' interests indicated that the majority were interested in acquiring basic knowledge of cameras, film types, lighting, etc. Therefore the theme of the next meeting will be "Know Your Camera", so bring your camera if you own one or come anyway if you don't and learn about someone else's camera! Everyone is welcome, regardless of your photographic experience or expertise.

SISTER MARY KIRCHOFF TO WORK WITH CAMBODIAN REFUGEES

Sister Mary Kirchoff spoke at the weekend Mass at Marian College last week about her work for the last three years in Kenya, Africa where she served as a medical doctor. This week she has responded to an urgent appeal for the community of the Medical Missionary Sisters to join a team of six sister-nurses to go to Thailand and work with the Cambodian refugees there. We wish Sister Mary God-speed, and a safe return to us at Marian!
