BOARD ACTION

Several individuals have been summoned before a Student Board Disciplinary session for alleged misconduct in the Mixed Lounge. This action centered around the current problem of the "Lounge Lovers." The CARBON would like to clarify the position of the Board on this matter.

Many critics of this action have proposed many unsuitable rationalizations that have completely missed the point in question. They have skillfully maneuvered around the issue. The Board is not concerned with moral judgements on any type of behavior. The Board is not attempting to legislate "morals." The Board is not placing a moral stamp of approval or disapproval on any type of behavior under any conditions.

The issue of concern to the Student Board is the simple fact that the Mixed Lounge is not the proper place for this type of behavior regardless of any consideration of right or wrong. The fact that there is "no other place" is not a sufficient motive. No college provides "love parlors" for students who are unable to secure suitable transportation. The lounge is not intended for a substitute. This type of behavior monopolizes the facilities, creates a poor impression to visitors, and arouses many complaints from faculty and students. The Student Board can be commended for handling an increasingly serious problem within the student body without recourse to the good offices of the Student Deans.

I SPY

Is nothing sacred? No, not when the CARBON is on the job. In keeping with our policy of going to any heights for an article, we have ascended into the atmosphere above the campus and focused our all seeing eye upon that heretofore impenetrable fortress of the sun goddesses, the Clare Hall sun deck.

From 12:35 to 2:00 P.M. yesterday the Phantom Sky Spy hovered and swooped gathering information.

Oh yes he did. And to prove it—here's what he saw:

-Kathy Kreuss in a yellow-orange fishnet outfit.
-Judy Steele-blue swimsuit.
-Mary Ann Brewer-pink two piece; sometimes a red flowered Mudd.
-Jane Westerman-brown swimsuit; turquoise and white striped towel, red pillow, gaily sunburn.
-Pat Moretti-blue suit, constantly applying unidentified liquid.
-Sharon Higgins-blue swimsuit, sun glasses, yellow scarf.
-Ginny Moretti-red blanket, blue beach jacket, blue and green flowered one piece.
-Lynn Haefeli-two piece blue and green flowered swimsuit.
-Cindy Maroni-black swimsuit.

With the three at rain and increasing winds the worshippers of Phoebus began to leave their citadel. Last to go was Sue Steele who lost a blue pillow in a gust of wind.

We Get Letters

The CARBON, sensitive gauge of student opinion which it is, recently registered another in its series of implicit and explicit appeals to the "lounge-lovers" to desist from their socially unacceptable and unbecoming activities in so public a place. This action is surely prompted by a consideration for the many who wish to use the Mixed Lounge for tamer types of recreation as well as for the protection of the public image of the College.

But why are those very same activities acceptable and becoming when they take place on the lawns of our fair campus, in the "privacy" of cars parked in front of Clare Hall, both day and night, on the very steps of that bastion of propriety and respectability?

In short, don't be too hard on the "lounge-lovers". They probably were inspired by the public parkers or the sweethearts of the stoop; if only they had wheels or a bit more nerve— they could join their more fortunate and acceptable friends outside.

Dear CARBON Editor,

Recently the sun deck in Clare Hall was closed to day student women. One of the reasons cited for this new rule was the lack of space. We would like to be able to use this facility but not at the expense of the resident students. We feel that day students should be allowed on the sun deck as long as there is available space. If, at any time, the deck becomes so congested that dorm students are kept from enjoying their privilege, day students should recognize this fact, and leave.

Another reason stems from the rash of thefts in the dorm. "Suspicious persons", such as day students, are considered a hindrance to the solution of this problem. It must be noted here that stealing occurred before the sun deck was opened.

We, as day students, would appreciate using this facility of Marian College.

Hey Man!

There's a slick pad made of cement which will house a romping, racy dance Sat. nite. 50¢ will get you over the net and in on the fun. A $5.00 door prize will be awarded to some racy cat.

The CRESTS will provide the racy. You come and provide the romp!

Another Letter

Even though this comes a week late, we wish to applaud the Sodality for its April 29 meeting. On that memorable day they invited Mike Hughes, a noted atheist, to speak on morals and the modern religious dilemma. Such open-mindedness on the part of religious groups is as precious as it is rare. We commend the Sodality for it.

The Free Thinkers of Marian College

Animal Farm

The CARBON would like to announce the opening of the Marian College division of the Indianapolis Humane Society which is now open to all wayward beasts found on the Marian campus. The division has its headquarters in the edifice known as the Men's Residence. To date 1 duck, 1 cat, and 1 rabbit and 1 house mother have found their home with boys from the South. New cases will be accepted from 9-5 daily. For more information, see Jeff McQueen or Dave Schuyl.

About Time

The CARBON would like to applaud the administration on the changes made in the curriculum schedules for the next semester. As a result of the departmental revisions, for which students have long been crying, we feel that the administration is taking a great step forward in attaining the type of scholastic excellence desired by administration and students alike.

The LAST LAST mixer of the year will be May 20; it will be sponsored by the Sophomore class.

On the wings of a snow white dove.

Spring Sting

Through a joint effort of the Y.C.S. and the University of Notre Dame's administration, Marian College will feature Notre Dame's #1 rock and roll band, The Shaggs, on May 21 from 8:30 to 11:30 P.M. This mixer will be the last dance of the year. Don't miss it. Tickets will go on sale today in front of the auditorium during lunch hour.
