Where did the money come from to pay for IABA field improvements?

Bryan Nixon
guest writer

"My feelings are hurt, and I feel taken advantage of," says head baseball coach Bret Shambaugh.

The culprit of his pain is the Indiana Amateur Baseball Association, which owes him a weighty sum of $1,500, he says.

Mr. Shambaugh says the IABA has a floating debt with him over labor he put in on the alterations of Marian's baseball field.

One month ago the Indianapolis Foundation awarded the IABA $40,000 to finish the ball field, and Mr. Shambaugh wonders where his cut is at.

In December of 1987, Marian penned a contract with the IABA to rebuild its ballfield. The contract stated that the IABA, a non-profit organization, was to raise all the funds for the field; Marian was free from paying the piper.

The IABA had to finish all work within three years, and in return they could play on the field scotch free for 20 years.

The creation was to cost $250,000.

But the IABA was struggling, and had three presidents in three years.

Ron Keller, current president of the IABA, said, "The IABA realized that it couldn't do all that it thought."

When Mr. Keller took over in September 1989, the IABA had spent way more on the field than it could raise.

"They had champagne taste, and a beer budget," Mr. Shambaugh said.

This December marks the end of the contracts three year grace period, and if the work isn't completed, Marian may not let the IABA pay off the field, Mr. Shambaugh said.

When asked if he have money out of his own pocket, Mr. Keller said he couldn't answer that one. But he did say that, "Its not if one person gave funds is important. What is, is that kids are given a place to play ball."

Eleven-hundred boys from the ages of 13-20 play on 55 IABA teams during the summer.

So for those with poverty thrust upon 'em, look out at our new field, chin up. Because money might grow on trees after all.

Quayle offers to help poor students get college cash

(CPS) -- About 20 students, apparently willing to try anything, have taken Vice President Dan Quayle up on a spontaneous promise to personally help any collegians who are having trouble paying their tuition bills and might be forced to drop out.

The vice president, in turn, has handed the pleas over to the "appropriate office," reports Craig Whitney, Quayle's assistant press secretary.

Quayle made the surprising offer in response to a student's questions at the national convention of the Society of Professional Journalists in Louisville, Ky., Oct. 12.

Just after Quayle's speech, University of Florida student West Davies rose during a question-and-answer period to tell Quayle more than 100 needy students were turned away from UF this fall because of a reduction in college loans and grants.

"That's a mistake," Davies told Quayle. "We are spending money on sophisticated weapons and not on our future with our students."

Quayle responded by saying the present level of higher education funding is sufficient.

When Davies pressed him for a better answer, Quayle came up with the clincher: "If anyone is being denied the opportunity for a higher education, then you tell them to write a letter to me and I will help them out."

Davies, who works 20 hours a week while taking 14 hours, decided to organize a letter-writing campaign.

the Independent alligator, UF's student paper, wrote an editorial calling on students to write to Quayle.

The 20 letters received so far contain "a wide array of cases ranging from people in financial straits to people who have been told their families make too much money to get financial aid," Whitney said.

Besides bumping the pleas to the "appropriate office," Whitney said Quayle's staff is trying to make sure students "are getting fair treatment and that the system was working properly."

Davies isn't surprised. "I did not believe for a minute that Vice President Quayle was going to help these students who wrote to him. I don't think he really cares about how people get through college."

But it's important, he added, to send letters just to remind the Bush administration of student concerns.

Letters can be sent to Vice President Dan Quayle, Washington, D.C. 20510.

Latest anti-smoking ad is too much for some students

(CPS) -- An American Cancer Society newspaper ad published in many college newspapers during the past month has provoked some student criticism of the papers that ran it.

"Some people said we shouldn't be running it," said Mark Beckman of the Fourth Estate, the student newspaper at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

One student at Davidson College in North Carolina complained it was "gross," added Mark Puckett of the Davidsonian, which also ran the ad.

The ad, titled "Sophisticated Lady," features a young woman, covered with tar and nicotine, holding a cigarette.

Underneath, the copy reads "If what happened on your inside happened on our outside, would you still smoke?"

Sophisticated Lady is part of the Cancer Society's campaign to promote the "Great American Smokeout" on November 15, when the Society encourages smokers to go one day without lighting up.

"Unless you do something out of the ordinary, it doesn't get noticed," explained Sue Kirkland, and American Cancer Society spokeswoman.

Kirkland, whose group circulated the ad as a public service message, added she did not know how many papers actually published it.

"The ad doesn't make people feel good," but it does get the message out," Kirkland added.

"I thought it was effective but a bit harsh," Beckman said.

Puckett agreed the ad was "powerful" as well as "gross."

In addition to the print ad, a television ad features the same young woman in an elaborate gown and make-up, who is slowly covered with tar and nicotine. At the end of the ad, she screams and tries to claw the muck off her face.

Both ads are meant to counter tobacco industry ads, aimed at young women, that try to make smoking look glamorous and fashionable, Kirkland said.

"Many of our spots have been funny and entertaining," Kirkland said. But those spots were not reaching young women, the only demographic group in which there has been an increase in the number of smokers.

Green Bay's Beckman said the ad alone probably wouldn't make a smoker quit.

"It would probably give you another reason to quit," he added.

MCSA becomes accessible, slates office hours

Marian College Student Association Officers want to hear student body concerns. In an effort to become more accessible to students, officers have established weekly office hours in the Student Activities Office (St. Francis Hall room 157).

"We are interested in what all students have to say and want to be accessible," commented Wendy Sloman MCSA Social Planning Chairman.

Offices and hours are: David Miller, president, Tues.-Thurs. 10:30-11:30 a.m.; Steve Swinford, vice president, Mon.-Wed. 9:30-10:45 a.m.; Tina Kunkler, secretary, Wed. 6:00-8:00 p.m.; Jim Meer, Treasurer, Mon. 1:30-2:30 p.m. and 5:30-6:30 p.m.; Wendy Sloman, Social Planning, Mon. and Friday 2:30-3:30 p.m.

Students are encouraged to stop by and talk with the officers! Students are also welcome and encouraged to attend the weekly MC Student Association meetings to voice concerns and opinions. The MCSA meetings are held each Tuesday at 9:00 p.m. in St. Francis Hall room 136.

Schick Super Hoops

For the eighth consecutive year, students will participate in the country's largest college sports program as the Schick Super Hoops 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament returns to campus. For the 1990-91 season, more than 200,000 students at nearly 800 colleges and universities are registered to compete.

The Schick Super Hoops Tournament is scheduled for Dec 2 & 9 at 6pm - Clare Gym. Students interested in registering a team should contact Mr. Henderson - Ext 347.

Schick Super Hoops combines a fun on-campus event and a competitive off-campus tournament with exciting prizes. The grand prize offers the top two male and female teams in each region the chance to compete for the championship at an NBA arena as part of an official NBA game. Other prizes include free NBA game tickets, trophies, t-shirts, K.Swiss athletic shoes, gym bags and free Schick Slim Twin Disposable Razors.

The program consists of three rounds. First, all participating schools conduct an on-campus 3-on-3 basketball tournament. Then, each of the championship teams competes at one of 22 Regional Festivals against other schools. From there, the top two male and two best female teams in each region play for the regional championship at the nearby NBA arena.
