

Plans discussed to revamp Judicial Panel and appeals

by Susan Schuppan & Stacey Nicholas

A measure before the College Council would change the composition of the Judicial Panel and the appeals process for student disciplinary actions.

The first proposal would institute a peer review panel before cases reached the Judicial Panel. Currently, the Judicial Panel is composed of four faculty members and three students.

The proposed peer review board would be comprised of two students from each residence hall and one commuter student. The panel would be responsible for hearing minor rule violations in which the punishment was not suspension or expulsion. Accused students would not be allowed to have a faculty advisor during the proceedings, but may have a student advisor.

The Student Affairs Staff and the Residence Life Staff believe that such a peer panel will give students a more responsible role in the Judicial Panel and feedback from other students may prove beneficial in the disciplinary process.

Members of the panel would be nominated by the respective hall council presidents and then selected by the director of residence life Cathy Bickel.

The second proposal would eliminate the Conduct Appeals Board which currently hears cases that are appealed from the Judicial Panel. The proposal would have all appeals going straight before the College President, Felicetti.

The third proposal submitted was a modification in the room search procedures. Resident assistants would be able to enter a room without permission only in the case of a health problem, maintenance emergency, safety reason, disturbing noise levels, or other special instances in which there was reason to believe that a rule was being violated.

During the discussion of these proposals at College Council, Andrew Hohman, theology/philosophy, argued that peer review panels are generally harsher not fairer. He stated that they "may be swifter, hasten action, but are not necessarily fairer." He also believed that Felicetti has better things to do with his time than to settle discipline problems.

Bickel responded that peers are harsher, but these students would be given a structured set of sanctions to help offset that problem.

Hohman also questioned the fairness of the proceedings that allows the panel to have an advisor, Bickel, and not the defendant. He noted that this is particularly unfair to freshmen and sophomore students who often do not have any clue about how the judicial system works.

Joyce Johnstone, education, shared this view.

Bickel responded that "students can defend themselves. They are smart

MC students become teachers

by Susan Schuppan

During this spring semester, twenty-five elementary education majors are doing their student teaching at various Indiana schools. The seniors are working in classrooms from kindergarten to sixth grade, with the majority in lower grade levels.

Just a few of the participating schools are Pleasant View, White Lick, Garden City, and St. Michael's in Greenfield.

"It is a lot of work, but it pays off because you learn so much," commented Angie Kuntz, who is currently teaching first grade at Pine Tree Elementary in Avon.

Through the education program, each student is required to take many hours of teacher aiding and observation as a part of their curriculum.

"My classes did prepare me for my teaching, but not completely. You have to experience it first to know how to react in each situation," said Diane Raver.

Raver is completing her student teaching in first grade at Garden City Elementary.

The twenty-five seniors involved in this year's program are Bobbi Brichler, Brad Buck, Jennifer Foster, Anna Gantner, Kini Huckaby, Lori Huffman, Julie Kinsey, Angie Kuntz, Laura Netherton, Tammy Poling, Diane Raver, Beth Riele, Amy Stomoff, Sue Veirling, Margaret Wood, Donna Flemister, Susan Hill, Carol Kuntz, Patty Legere, Kathy Martin, Suzie McOmber, Dawn Sauter, Tara Sinner, Kellie Via, and Cindy Vriesman.

Barry Manilow steals the show

by Stacey Nicholas

"Copacabana" won this year's Knightly Music Awards, lip sync contest, held during Little Brother/Little Sister Weekend.

Performing the Barry Manilow hit was Jennifer Wood, Michelle Probst, Kari Palma, Regina Garza, Geoff Thompson, Lance Waters, Kenny Richards, and Jerry Bessler.

The crowd cheered as Richards impersonated Manilow's disco style and as the "Energizer Bunny" cut through the act.

Yvette Wade, junior, took second place honors with her portrayal of the blues singer Shug Avery from The Color Purple.

Wrapping up the title spots was the baseball team doing a "baseball mix." As Matt Laker mimicked the best of Coach Brett Shambaugh, the crowd roared. Throughout the four song medley, the team, led by senior Dave Disbro, had some of the members of the audience dancing in the aisles.

Fortunately, their on-field moves are better coordinated than their on-stage moves.

Since it was Little Sibs Weekend, my sibs had some comments of their own, particularly regarding "Dr. Feelgood." Krystal, age 4, remarked "They're silly." But don't be disheartened because Jarrod, age 16, wanted to know where he could find some Nasty Habits.

Throughout the evening, Clare Hall Board raffled off prizes for the kids. Little sibs won everything from Itza Pizza frisbees to Easter baskets. This was an excellent idea because it helped keep the younger kids involved with what was happening.

Clare Hall should also be commended for turning this one time Bacchanalian event into a fun and entertaining evening.

MCSA funded Knightly Music Awards.

The Soviet Union carried out its threat and cut off natural gas supplies to Lithuania on Tuesday, 4/17. Soviets threatened to cut off oil supplies Wednesday. Lithuanian officials say the action will not weaken their resolve to gain independence.

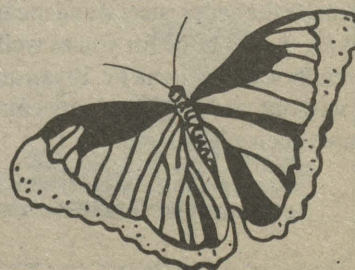

Civil rights leader Rev. Ralph Abernathy died on Tuesday, 4/17, at the age of 64. Abernathy was a colleague of Martin Luther King, Jr.

On Tuesday, federal prosecutors ordered 173 American banks to turn over financial records. The suspected accounts allegedly held $400 million in Colombian drug profits. Banks in 22 states are involved, with the largest number being in Florida and New York.

The Lighter Side?

I've only been here at "Camp M" since January, so I'm still on the outside when it comes to knowing what makes Marian tick. I have, however, noticed a gross tragedy each week in this paper called the "Lighter Side."

Being a first semester freshman, I hardly think I am worthy of judging someone else's writing -- but I know garbage when I see it.

Each week I get my copy of the Carbon and eventually read the "Lighter Side." At first, I thought it might have been a bad week. It could happen to anyone, you know.

Time after time, however, the articles were wordy and full of nothing. What is the piece supposed to be about anyway? If it's supposed to be funny, (like the name alludes to) tell a joke. If it is supposed to be serious, let's have some cohesion with a theme.

This rambling dribble is a tragedy because with some basic writing skills and fresh ideas the piece could be wonderful. Unfortunately, we, the readers, are subjected to an amateurish, slipshod fragment, full of inside jokes and hidden meanings. I say to the writer -- you are responsible to the readers. Listen as we speak or please be gone and let someone else express his creativity.

Pride in Marian College

Intermittently for over 30 years I have been affiliated with Marian College. My son, Patrick, graduated from here. My daughter, Pam, is a freshman. I am completing my degree and have worked here for 10 1/2 years. Being part of the Marian community has always been a source of pride for me. I feel that Marian guides its students to be successful human beings. One very good example of this is the fact that Laura Sears Dietzen, a 1987 graduate, and Patrick Webb, a 1988 graduate, have been notified that they have been chosen as the two outstanding Rehabilitation Psychology graduate students at IUPUI. They were chosen from among 28 of their peers. Significantly, these two also won the Joseph N. Hington Distinguished Senior Psychology Award while here at Marian. It is a real tribute, not only to Laura and Patrick, but to Marian, the Psychology Department and the English Department (which Patrick also majored in). All of us are very proud of their achievements.

To All Who Attended the 1990 Pass-over Seder:

Thank you for your attendance and enthusiastic participation. Your involvement made the seder special and meaningful for me. (I hope for you as well.) I especially want to thank Fr. Bryan and Gail, without whom the evening could not have been what it was.

-- Brian Adler

Thanks from Clare Hall Board

I would like to thank everyone who helped with the Knightly Music Awards. The show was a success because of the hard work and dedication of many people. Special thanks go out to the MC's (Martin and Vince), the judges (Dr. and Mrs. Felicetti, Dean Woodman, Karen Childers, Jeff Campbell, Mr. Hoogerwerf, and Mr. Freese), Cindy Kopenec, Tina Kunkler, all the participants, and the members of the Clare Hall Board.

Thanks also to everyone who watched the show. Your support was very much appreciated.

Clare Hall Board President

Carbon evaluation

As a student newspaper, the Carbon could be a highly useful publication for the students, faculty and others. Instead, it is a joke. Opinionated pieces, such as Hesselgrave's Black History Month article, Women's History Month article, and the play "review", clutter the pages. The paper is filled with junk--I have no better word for the numerous fillers the paper uses to cover up white space that could be used more wisely.

Instead of quality articles that could inform the community, we receive cartoons. Do you realize that in the March 19 issue, there were four of them, one even took up half a page? If these were deleted, we could receive information such as schedule changes (i.e. The past Ash Wednesday schedule change) or community news like Dr. Felicetti's changes in the administrative structure. Heck, I'd even be willing to read about national and international events like apartheid in South Africa and the lobbying in Washington for new abortion laws.

Also, has any of the staff ever taken a journalism course? In most newspapers the editorial is treated separately from the letters to the editor, the editorial is not signed, and letters to the editor are not replied to. In most papers, beats are used to cover all parts of the community. The Carbon needs to be informative to the whole community--residents, commuters, non-traditional students, faculty, and parents.

Until these changes are made, I will continue to read the walls for news--literally, the bulletin board next to the registrar's office. Let's face it, the biggest joke of all is the paper.

An afternoon of history

by Stacey Nicholas

On Friday, April 6, Marian College held a special reception for approximately 25, mostly retired, Sisters of Saint Francis. Students had the opportunity to interact with the Sisters during a desert reception in the afternoon.

I skipped my history class to attend this reception (yes, Dr. Divita now knows this) and I learned more than I thought possible. Sr. Marie Therese, who worked in the library with me during my freshman year, gave me advice on how to raise African Violets, "very little water, indirect sunlight, and love."

Sr. Rachel Schulte introduced me to Sr. Ruth Grieve who had been working in Papua New Guinea. I got a quick, but enlightening, history of the Pacific island from her. She told a group of us about the consequences of pushing a primitive group of people into the modern age. Imagine throwing gold nuggets to kill small game. She doesn't have to imagine it, she works with people who have experienced it.

But the sister that really captured my heart was Sr. Adelaide. She is 93 years old and, as she tells it, her sister is 110 years old. Sr. Adelaide told us about her life in the German Catholic community of Lanesville. Ethnic settlement patterns, see I was learning history.

Sr. Adelaide did not let her age stop her from enjoying life. The one time chemistry professor brought her work boots because she had plans to work in the wet lands. Thank heaven that someone hid the boots.

It was also a different picture of the sisters that I work with everyday. Through their care and devotion to each other, I caught a glimpse of what living in a religious community means.

Normally, I don't do old people. Yes, I know that sounds horrible, but they scare me. Seriously, it forces me to realize that I'm not going to be 22 forever.

But this experience brought some comfort and hope because these ladies were active, exciting, and very alive. They were living life to its fullest, even if that meant a little slower.

Mrs. Felicetti should receive the highest compliments for planning such a wonderfully educating and entertaining afternoon.

Easter reflection

by Raymond List

The cover of the Liguorian had the picture of "Jesus Laughing" by Willis Wheatley. The title at the bottom was "A Time For Joy." The issue came out during Lent, about the time that the Church commemorates the death of Jesus.

A woman later sent a letter of complaint to the Liguorian. She felt that the remembrance of Jesus's death was not a time for joy.

I completely disagree with her. Even though the memory of his cruel torture and his tragic death is very sad, it is still a cause for joy, since his suffering and death was not the end, but the beginning of new life.

At the time of his death, life seemed very bleak and hopeless for his disciples. The man that they had put all their trust and hope in had been disgraced, condemned and killed by their religious leaders. All reasons for living, all hope for their life was gone. In the midst of their despair, Jesus rose from the dead and renewed their hope and their life.

This gives us hope for our own periods of doubt, despair, and pain. We know that Jesus suffered as we suffered, and he will help us overcome the dark, painful times as he did. Therefore, no matter how dark life becomes, how painful our suffering, how deep our despair and doubt, we still have hope in the knowledge that someday our suffering will end and that we will have renewed life and renewed hope. That is why the picture of "Jesus Laughing" is appropriate during the time we remember his death. It reminds us that he overcame suffering, sin, and even death and that he will help us do the same. This is the promise of the crucifixion and the resurrection. This is the promise of Easter.

OPEN HEARING ON CONVOCATIONS PROGRAM

How are we doing? Where are we going?

The Convocations Committee invites all interested persons or parties to attend one of the two open hearings on the Convocations Program at Marian College:

Thursday, April 19, 12:15-1:15 p.m.

Wednesday, April 25, 3:00-4:00 p.m.

Locations have not yet been determined, but will be published before these hearings. The purpose of the hearings is to consider the current performance and future direction(s) of the Convocation Program.

Background. The Marian College Convocation Program was established by the College Council on December 9, 1986. The stated purpose of the program was "to enrich the general education experience of the total college community and provide a broadly based program of prominent speakers and performers." The program is administered by the Convocations Committee, a standing committee of the College Council. The current Convocations Program and the policy as it pertains to full-time students during or after Spring, 1988, can be found in the college catalogue, p. 31, and reports of the Convocations Committee to College Council.

Current Circumstances and Issues. Several factors have led the Convocations Committee to call these open hearings. (1) The committee desires to set forth a comprehensive policy to cover full- and part-time students across the board at Marian College. (2) For the first time, students under the convocations requirement are approaching graduation. Several issues have surfaced in trying to decide how to apply the requirement--including the recognition that it is a requirement. The Committee has had to take a position on individual cases and therefore sees a need for greater publication of the program and the principles which the committee is currently employing. (3) Some students and faculty do not seem to grasp the goal or validity of the convocation requirement. (4) Each department or group of departments was originally to sponsor a convocation. The initiative and, in a sense, the work was to come from the departments. In the first convocations such seems to have actually been the case. More recently, however, the Convocations Committee has been saddled with more and more of the planning, execution, publicity, and other responsibilities of the Convocation Program. What was once the coordinator and overseer has become the prime mover and day laborer. Departments have been reluctant to sponsor a convocation; they have also been reluctant to undertake promotion with students and the proposal of alternatives as needed.

The Open Hearing. The above background and current status of the convocation program is the context of this meeting. However, the open hearings themselves are to hear your concerns, convictions, suggestions regarding any and every aspect of the program. The committee does not intend to debate the issue in these public hearings. Please come. In the end the Convocations Program will only be as good as the people and the work invested in it.

Senior profile

by Frances Kepes

Chances are you have spied her on campus -- usually clad in cast-off men's raincoats and sporting scuffed, paint-splattered boots -- but you might not know her name. Frances Kepes is a senior art student who hails from the quiet hamlet of Lowell, Indiana.

"Actually, I'm a native Texan -- I'm half-Mexican," she adds.

After graduating from Andrean High School in Merrillville, Kepes was determined to pursue a career in medicine, particularly pediatrics.

"When I enthusiastically jumped ashore Marian four years ago, I thought I knew exactly the path my life would take. I studied inorganic chemistry, watched "Knots Landing" religiously, and joined the other girls who poufed up their hair, donned cute pastel-colored outfits and partied with the intellectual heavyweights majoring in physical education.

"When I compared notes with my friends at the University of Chicago, I.U., and Carnegie-Mellon, I was stunned to discover that college dorm life could include activities such as impromptu student discussions of Flemish painters, 60's revivalism, and metaphysics over cups of cappuccino.

"A wave of disgruntlement washed over me as I realized that the intellectual climate of the student body here at Marian wouldn't allow for such a thing. During my first semester here, for example, a handful of red-necked, mud-slinging ball-players informed me, at a Doyle Hall party, that 'This is a conservative school -- people like you don't belong here.' My initial suspicion has been confirmed many times since."

By the next year, Kepes, disgusted with the close-mindedness and apathy of the majority of the student body, had so withdrawn socially that she considered dropping out of school entirely. Shortly after, at the insightful suggestion of Andrew Hohman, Kepes indulged in a short vacation from college when she hooked up with a friend's band then touring the midwest.

Responsibility to school pulled Kepes, refreshed and renewed, out of Milwaukee and back into the Hoosier Circle City. Upon returning to Marian, the one-time pre-med major devoted herself to the pursuit of art -- some of which was exhibited at her art show last fall. Visitors may have noticed displays of her "underground" publication, The FRANCES Forum.

Kepes has displayed work, including a performance art piece, at a gallery downtown and currently serves as an intern at the Indianapolis Museum of Art.

A graduating member of the Honors Program and a member of the Honors Committee for the past two years, Kepes encourages other students to accept the academic challenges of the program.

She has spent college summers in Oklahoma City, Dallas, Baltimore, and Washington, D. C., visiting some of her eight brothers and sisters. In addition, Kepes acts as a Big Sister to an Indianapolis teenager.

Following graduation, Kepes plans to pursue graduate study in either print-making or film. She would like to thank all those faculty who have encouraged her continuing search for independence, development, and expression: Dr. Appleby, Sr. Sue Bradshaw, Mark Hall, Andy Hohman, Mary Ellen Reed, Megan Rohn, and Sr. Olga Wittekind.

Bill Pedtke, president of MCSA, commented that to "take away the advisor is often to take away the ability of the student to follow the logic or train of thought in the case being presented."

Faye Plasak-Craig, psychology, voiced her opinion that the student should be allowed to have a faculty advisor who would be an advocate for the student in the same manner that the director of residence life is an advocate for the panel.

When questioned about the confidentiality of student records, Bickel responded "that's an issue critical in training."

The council decided to postpone the issue and vote on it during the May 13 meeting. College Council meets at noon in the study room, second floor, Marian Hall.
